INTRODUCTION OF PGDM

PGDM Programme is renowned for its extensive and in-depth coverage of core and specialized courses, creating professionals who are innovative and have entrepreneurial qualities. The Programme is approved by All India Council for Technical Education (AICTE), Ministry of Education, Govt. of India.

The two-year full-time Post Graduate Programme comprises four semesters. The first two semesters focus on Foundation and Application aspects of management, and the last two semesters focus on Specialization and Integration with global developments in different areas of management.

In addition, the curriculum includes regular assignments and live projects, summer internships, and an end-term research project. Managerial and leadership skills amongst students on a voluntary basis. PGDM provides students with a sound understanding of the different disciplines and functions of business management. The core curriculum develops essential skills and knowledge in the areas of Economics, Organizational Behaviour, Finance and Accounting, Management Control, Marketing, Human Resource Management, Information Systems, Quantitative Methods, Logistics, Business Analytics, Data Science, etc., to name a few.

The PGDM Programme offers a unique feature, whereby a student can choose courses from two areas of specialization, thus having a broader choice of careers. The student can opt for a single specialization as well. The dual specialization of PGDM has an advantage over MBA dual specialization in terms of course content that can be synced for the right career path. The second-year courses are a mix of compulsory (core) courses and electives in the specialization areas of the student's choice.

A Study of Consumer Buying Decision toward Sustainable Packaging of FMCG Market – A Case Study of South Delhi

ABSTRACT

The FMCG industry and its success is heavily dependent on packaging. Apart from marketing and logistics, the environmental impact of packaging is a growing concern amongst civil society and regulators alike. It is pertinent to assess the readiness of the entire ecosystem to adapt and adopt new means of packaging for a sustainable e-commerce industry. This paper adopts a cross-sectional study design to gain insights into consumer buying behaviour toward sustainable packaging of FMCG market. One way ANOVA analysis is used for analysing the data of the study. The test statistic reveals that there is a significant relationship between the income of the consumers and awareness about sustainable packaging. Further, the study reveals that the buying behaviour of consumers and their awareness towards the sustainable packaging in the FMCG industry is statistically linked to their income (low Income, middle Income and high Income). The study focussed on the consumers of South Delhi. The study presents further avenues to be explored to reach diverse income groups to adopt sustainable packaging for FMCG products.

Keywords: Fast Moving Consumer Goods (FMCG), Sustainable Packaging, e-commerce

I. INTRODUCTION

In recent times, sustainable packaging has become a crucial aspect of customer purchasing choices. Growing awareness of environmental problems and the harm that traditional packaging causes to the environment has made consumers more inclined to select products packaged sustainably. The purpose of this study is to look into the various facets of sustainable packaging and how customer behaviour and purchase decisions are affected by it. When opposed to standard packaging, sustainable packaging utilizes resources and methods that have less of an impact on the environment. This involves cutting back on the total quantity of packaging used and utilizing recyclable, biodegradable, or compostable materials. Furthermore, energy efficiency, waste minimization, and the utilization of renewable resources throughout the packaging process are all aspects of sustainable packaging. Packaging is now a potent tool for communication as well as function. The packaging of a product is frequently the first thing that buyers see when perusing store shelves. It influences views and preferences in addition to aesthetics, which ultimately influences purchasing decisions. Sustainable packaging becomes a strategic requirement as more and more businesses realize this. Packaging is responsible for almost one-third of the population, especially when it comes to everyday products like food. The effect on the environment is significant. As more people become conscious of this, they demand more environmentally friendly options. This requirement is met by sustainable packaging, which also promotes responsible consumption.
